LONDON, June 2

Sir Francis Chantrey left the income of a large portion of his personal estate in trust to the president and council of the Royal Academy, to be annually works in painting or sculpture of British artists, produced within the limits of the United Kingdom. For some time past by actions and appeals the question has been whether the Academy under this bequest is bound to accept of works under the condition that the works which had not been practically completed by being finished in marble or bronze. This week it has been finally decided that they cannot do so, a rather serious decision for sculptors, who have to make the decision for themselves, beyond the models in clay, unless they know that they can find a purchaser or have a very good chance of doing so. It is not only an important matter to an artist to have his work bought by the Academy under such conditions, but for the reason that the Academy will not accept of works unless they have the full endorsement of merit—as good in its way as the awarding of a medal, better than that of the Royal Academy, and the awarding of one of the medals given by Continental schools.

It will be interesting in connection with the decision to remember the year for purchase, and the prices paid for them. First come Herkomer's "The Chapel of the Charterhouse," £2200; next John M. Swan's "The Prodigal Son," £700; Mr. H. M. Amos' "Hands to the Plough," £1000; Mr. Amos' "The Hands to the Plough," £200; and lastly affectionate, a German vice. The suggestion is by no means flattering, but the clever Frenchman put it in a pleasant, anecdotal way. He told me that there is no truth in the report that he has considered arrangements for a marriage with a young, beautiful, and accomplished girl; but I gathered that he hoped to see Greater Britain sooner or later. He speaks English well, but with a foreign accent; and Joseph Knight, in proposing his health, said, "I am glad to see an American who seemed to have caught so entirely the American manner. Max O'Reall's wife translates his manuscripts from French into English. She is English and has a very happy, graceful style."

It is pleasant to be the age for the young. Mr. Gilbert, the sculptor, whose Victoria is undoubtedly the work of the day, is quite a young fellow; he does not look more than five and twenty. Stanley Forbes is equally youthful; Margaret Fuller is a young woman, and I have been reassured from the Governor by Henry Irving (who has commissioned him to design the dresses for "The Dead Heart"), is only six and twenty; and I have seen in the reviews that there are scores of young men and women examples.

But the Post and the Evening News have been amalgamated as to be jointly mad, it is said, by Mr. Biggar for an offensive line on their where the sun can shine upon it for the greater part of the day, especially during the forenoon. It must also be well worked in the garden, and towards the end of winter, when plants are at rest, but be careful not to work deeply close to the rootstock especially, for roots cannot suffer their roots to be much disturbed, but do better when the roots are in the garden. It must be worked in, for the soil cannot supply for ever the foods plants are constantly extracting from it. These must be occasionally artificially supplied (of course no manure is needed for the first year, but) and by adding manure to the soil harm may be done by adding manure to a soil already sour, and I know of no more general manure that can be so safely applied as farmyard manure, and perhaps the best way to use it is all at once, in the spring, thus forming an excellent mulch against the heat of the sun in the summer, and a fertiliser at the same time. At the end of the following winter this may be 3ag of Manure per bush, and in the spring the most valuable plant food is lost by applying manure in this manner, but quite recently some of the most eminent agricultural chemist of England have demonstrated that nothing is lost by spreading the fresh manure on the ground and over gardeners will only have patience to wait, even its substance will be found to increase as the plant grows. The Countess of Pembroke, a hybrid tea, should perhaps be rated next to La France. It is lovely here, even rivaling that famous one (La France) in its perfume, is of a soft pinkish rose color, deepening to the centre, and always opens perfectly.

If we were asked to select the four best offering ones, we could unhesitatingly name Mitchell, Climbing Decolente, Marie Henriette, and Belle Lyonnaise. The first named may be considered the king of roses, requires but little pruning, and flowers throughout the year, but the others should be that they obtain it bidden to be American roses.

There is much country business regarding the best stock to use for this rose. It may be that persons more largely than in Europe. In many of the Northern cities they practise as physicians, and seem to have found little or no pedicle in the medical schools have been provided for them in some Universities. It was less easy to get an admission to the bar, yet several have passed this, and the number seems to increase. They are mostly devoted to the study of the law, and to the practice. One edits, or lately edited, the Illinois Law Journal, with great acceptance. Several have entered the Christian ministry, though, I think, only in what may be called the minor sects, and one has been a Unitarian minister. The spirit is more conservative. Several have made success as professional lecturers. One is little of them in engineering and in journalism. They are seldom to be seen in the offices of hotels, should be the land lie low it must be drained. For the purpose 3in. porous pipes laid from 24in. to 6 in. below the surface, and about 8ft. apart, leading to a point where the waters can escape, will be the most efficient means of drainage. The plants which flourish it must be situated in the open, so the sun can shine upon it for the greater part of the day, especially during the forenoon. Manure must also be well worked with a garden fork and water, at least once a week, towards the end of the winter, with special care to the roots, but especially, for the plants which grow close to the rubbish heap, for they cannot suffer their roots to be much disturbed, do better when the roots remain impacted in soil. Farmyard manure at this time be worked in, for the soil cannot suffer for it. These plants are placed in the soil from the first of These plants are placed occasionally artificially supplied (of course manure is needed for the first year, or even the second; indeed, much harm may be done by adding manure to a soil already sour), and I know of no more general means of securing a crop of so many general purposes. The best way to secure all its properties is to obtain it very fresh, and spread it at the time it is springing, thus forming an excellent mulch against the heat of the sun in the summer, and a shield at the same time. In the fall, the following winter, the manure be dug in. Hitherto it has been thought that much valuable plant food is being applied that in that manner, but quite recently some of the most eminent agricultural chemists of England have demonstrated that nothing is lost by the use of fresh manure on the working soil, even

Their corpses were well preserved, and were clad in an uncoloured robe of silk. On Isabella's breast was found a small gilt bronze, and a vase bearing the armignoli of the Visconti.

The costumes used in "The Yeomen of the Guard," at the Theatre Royal, and in "Joseph's Dream" at the Criterion, are deserving of more than passing attention, because in both cases they are chosen with a view to helping the scenes. The grim and ghostly Tower in Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan's opera would be indeed gloomy were it not for the market-aid boatmen, who form the majority of the male chorus. The visitor to the Tower is to-day shown over the historical fortress by guides who are dressed in precisely the same dress as in the time of Henry VIII.

long since one of these so-called saurians obtained a rat, and bent its tail till the tip touched the centre of its back. Secured for some time in that position, the tip at last took root and attached itself firmly to the poor creature's spine a considerable distance from the latter's termination. The bandages were then removed, and the tail cut short at the thickest part. The result, of course, was that the quadruped had its tail transferred to the middle of its back, but wrong end up. It is almost superfluous to point out that in such a position it was constantly in the way—

In the Legislative Assembly to-day, the Bill and a Bill Defining the Law Relating to Defamation, were read a second time, after debate. Speaking on the latter bill, which introduced by Sir Samuel Griffith, the speaker said he did not see why members of the Assembly should be protected, or even barristers. He would also ask why the society papers were allowed to traduce the character of public men and attack helpless women. Should these sewer rats and collectors of garbage be allowed to do all that and not protection of the law. He hoped a provision would be included in the bill to protect the people, and to check this growing alien. He thought something ought to be done to check reckless statements frequently made by members of the Assembly, and also by Judges. The went into committee on the Eight Hours Bill, which was discussed at great length; but little progress was made. The House adjourned shortly after 11 p.m.

HOBART, Feb. 19.
The financial statement was debated in the Assembly to-night. The leader of the Opposition urged that the estimates of income were not to be realised, and that no provision was made for inevitable expenditure, so that really there was no surplus to pay off a portion of the debt. The Treasurer replied, contending that his estimate would be borne out, and that £20,000 more was available to pay off the deficiency on each year after the present one. He did not, however, refer to the structure as to the expenditure, which he, but has not been provided for. Several members spoke, the chief feature of the discussion being many strong contentions in favour of a protective policy. The debate was adjourned till next day.

MELBOURNE, Fri.

The superintending engineer of the Yan Yean has furnished a report in reply to Dr. D. B. statement regarding the presence of typhoid in the Yan Yean water. Mr. Davidson points out that the water is subjected from time to time to investigation by eminent scientific men, and his opinions are always favourable as to its purity. Mr. Davidson believes that the water is even now than then.

The Central Board of Health to-day discussed the subject of the alleged germs of typhoid in the Yan Yean water. The general opinion was there was no reason to suppose that there were such germs in the reservoir. Mr. Cosmo N. said that he had made many tests of the Yan water, and found it far purer than any other free water. Professor Mason said his experience coincided with that of Mr. Cosmo Newbery, president said the board would take no steps matter, as the Water Supply Department had it up.

Snow had been arrested from Sydney this morning, and was on the ship Carl Rock, which was to go to sea on this afternoon, but was unable to do account of the heavy sea breaking across the bar. BRISBANE, FRIDAY.
The Government have accepted the resignation of Mr. Neill, Engineer for Harbours and Rivers, with regret, granting him 12 months leave on full pay in recognition of his long and distinguished services. The resignation was caused by the necessity of Mr. Neill being absent in England for two or three years.

The Observer to-night draws attention to traps set in Brisbane to ruin young girls. It intones the case of a shop, ostensibly a tobacconist's, fitted up in an attractive manner with screens and mirrors, and used for immoral purposes. A respectable young girl was sent there by a registry office as an assistant, and the woman keeping the shop went to a well-known business man. The girl was taken away from the shop by her friends.
